of the prisoner's identity, and maintained that it was exceedingly improbable that any other person than prisoner committed the offence. He also referred to the conduct of the prisoner in-law, Anna Barrell, in leaving the witness on the Tuesday night, which was exceedingly significant, namely, that apprehending his violence under the influence of liquor, she left the house. If, however, the minds of the jury were not satisfied that the offence had been committed by the prisoner, it would be competent for them to find the statutes, to find him guilty of an attempt to commit a rape.

His Honor then summed up, and read all the evidence bearing upon the case, after which the jury retired to consider.

The prisoner was then remanded for sentence.

FRAUDULENT INSOLVENCY.

The case of Thomas Gilbert Spence for fraudulent insolvency was commenced, but at the rising of the Court was postponed.

REGINA v. DENNIS.—In this case, reported yesterday, the prisoner was found guilty of a common assault only.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.
THURSDAY.
 Before the Police Magistrate, with Messrs. S. Cohen, Day, Lanchan, G. Hill, and Kettle.
 Five drunkards were fined 10s. each, and one was sent to Darlington for three months.
 Thomas King was charged with an attempt to rob the southern branch of the Bank of New South Wales in this city. Sergeant Thompson, of the Mounted Police, was that about a quarter of five before one o'clock yesterday he saw prisoner on the sandhills at Redfern, proceeding towards Baptist's Gardens, followed by a man who informed him (witness) that the prisoner was one of two men he saw come out of the branch Bank of New South Wales, Parramatta-street, where an attempt had been made to commit a robbery with violence; in consequence of this information, followed him; on coming up with him, ordered him to stand, adding that if he raised a hand he (witness) would blow his brains out; this was near Elizabeth-street; he stood, and constable Colquhoun, who was following him on foot, handcuffed him; took from his breast pocket a revolver (pranduced), ready capped, each barrel being loaded; the man who gave witness the information said that he was in the service of Mr. Holroyd, and was that night to proceed to Wollongong. Constable Colquhoun deposed that about half-past twelve yesterday, he saw prisoner in a paddock at Redfern, belonging to

Mr. Wood and Thompson, pursued by two men on horseback, one of whom reported to witness that he (prisoner) had been concerned in an attempt to rob the branch Bank of New South Wales in Parramatta-street, went then after prisoner, who, being at a distance of fifteen or twenty yards, saw coming about to enter, called out, "Do not come any further," and taking a revolver from his breast pocket, covered him (witness) therewith; witness said "Do not make bad worse; you had better surrender," prisoner said he would not, and proceeded on his way, but did not run; y<sup>e</sup> more followed with equal steps, so that he was about the same distance from prisoner, when sergeant Thompson stopped him just as he was about to cross the fence; he had the smell of liquor upon him, but did not appear to be the worse for liquor; after handcuffing him, he inquired his name, and he said "Sir William Thomas, I am the son of a duke;" witness said, "This is a bad case for you," to which he replied, "If they eat me, they must cook me first;" asked him how many times he

"God help you, you are a silly child," took him to the bank, where he was identified as one of four men who had attempted to sick them up; took him there to the station-house, where inspector Singleton found upon him a bowie knife (produced); at the station-house he gave as his name William King. Mr. Roberts (who, with Mr. Bowden, appeared for the prosecution) asked for a remand until such day as their Worship may appoint, as it would be necessary to search the records.

George Howe and Henry Sexton, for disorderly conduct, were ordered to pay 10s. each, or to be imprisoned forty-eight hours.

Catherine Miller was ordered to pay 10s., or to be imprisoned twenty-four hours. Ann Glover to pay 20s., or to be imprisoned seven days. and Hannah Thompson to pay 40s., or to be imprisoned fourteen days, on conviction of having made use of obscene language.

Richard Hunt, publican, was fined 20s., for having willfully delayed to admit the police into his house; and Alexander Gray was fined 10s. for Sunday trading.

WATER POLICE COURT.
TUESDAY.
BEFORE the Water Police Magistrate and Mr. T. Cooper.

Michael Coffey, labourer, convicted of having stolen a pair of trousers and a shirt, the property of a seaman named Henry Fisher, of the ketch Ann. It appeared that on Saturday last Fisher went into the White Swan, George-street, and placed the trousers and shirt, which he had just bought, on the counter. A prisoner, on coming in, took these off and put them into an orangewoman's basket which he took from her, and pretended to be selling oranges. They were afterwards pledged in the name of Mrs. Kidd. (See 1st.)

sentenced to a month's hard labour in gaol.
Ali, Hassan, Nadin Hagl, lascar seamen of the Shah shan, charged with desertion, were sent on board their ship.
David Brennan, found drunk in George-street, was fined 10s., or to be imprisoned for twenty-four hours.

EFFECTS OF THE DROUGHT.—In the Northern district (says the Times and Examiner) the intense heat and withering drought which had prevailed for the previous five weeks was broken on Saturday morning last, and a copious fall of rain began, which lasted several hours; but so parched had everything become, that, although the shower was heavy, yet in an hour or two after it ceased one could hardly say whether it had rained at all. The atmosphere, however, continued cool, and another fall of rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, occurred on Tuesday afternoon. These showers have done much good, especially to the oniards, and we may hope for an abundant supply of fruit this season. The grape vines look as well as ever we have seen them, and we believe a large yield is anticipated. This delicious fruit grows to perfection up here; indeed, better than we have observed in any other part of the colony. The rain has, however, come a little too late to be of much service to the wheat or potato crops, but will be of much service to the late maize crops. At present the atmosphere is delightfully cool, and we would take leave momentarily.

ACCIDENTS FROM GUNPOWDER.—The other day, two children from Black Creek, two of them under five years of age, while playing near the railway works, saw a barrel of gunpowder lying there. They at once took possession of about two pounds of the combustible, and placed it in a hole two feet deep, covering it over with a little earth. Having seen blasting operations, they appear to have imagined that the opportunity was favourable for such an experiment. One of the children fetched a fire stick, and on his return, both stood over the hole to have a satisfactory view of the blasting process. On the powder being ignited they were blown away, and fearfully injured—including it is said the loss of sight. They are still alive, but in a most hopeless state. The wonder appears to have been that they were not blown to pieces.—On Wednesday last, a man named McGee, working at the railway works near Jump-up, was dreadfully injured by an explosion of gunpowder. He had got ready three pounds of powder to use for blasting, and before ramming it home did not sufficiently cover it. In consequence a spark from the iron must have reached it, and caused the whole of the powder to explode, throwing M'Gee to the ground and injuring his face frightfully, one arm also was injured. It is uncertain yet whether he has or will in consequence lose his sight, but a fatal result is not anticipated.—Singleton Times.

need was that the Church of England was a mass of cor- | this motion, an h

ple motion, as he did not think it was at all desirable, possibly the present session, and the Government had already intimated their intention to bring in a Bill himself. It was not until the 10th of March, 1859, that at the time of the House had been too much hurried by pressing by motions of this character, on the 11th of March, the Government were fully agreed. He was, him- self, in favour of the principle, and he always understood the majority of the House were also in favour of it. He was not, however, in favour of the mode in which the principle should be carried out. He felt that there was necessity for pressing such a motion now, more especially in the current year. (Cries of "Oh, oh," and "Hear, he hear.") There was very little private business of importance on paper, and the Government business might, he thought, be well got through in the course of the week. He was in favour of "The Elective Council Bill." He did not, the Free, see that any necessity existed for pressing it.

Mr. WILSON said he differed altogether in opinion from the hon. Colonial Secretary, as to the probability of the present session closing with the current year. He did not believe it was at all possible that the Government would succeed in carrying out their programme. He was of opinion that it was possible that the Estimates could be hurried through, or that the important measures now before the other Chamber could be hurried through, but he was not at all sure that the Colonial Secretary intended to ask the House to pass the Estimates in globes to pass them by a single vote. But there was another important reason why this session would not close with the current year. The Colonial Secretary for passing an elective Upper House Bill. What the chance of carrying a bill for the abolition of State aid of religion was, he was not at all sure. He was not a member for Morpeth might have made out a stronger case if he had shown the deleterious effect of State-aid to the colony. It had been said that this colony could do without religion, and he was not at all sure that he maintained that no country in the world could do it better, and if there were instances of inefficient war-shiping in religion, it was not the Government's business to interfere, but having State-paid clergy. In America the clergy were paid by voluntary contributions very high salaries indeed, and so they would be here if we had a State-paid clergy. He was not at all sure that he could love of God and of their fellow-men. He called upon those members who professed to be in favour of the abolition of State-aid not to throw a damp upon the question by saying that it was impossible.

Mr. PIDDINGTON thought they had had too much discussion of this question. The hon. member for Morpeth who could not be charged with a want of vigour in doing his duty, had been very much in the habit of expressing his feelings, amusingly concluded by telling them that he was in communication with the Government upon the matter, and his unqualified nature agreed to the Colonial Secretary, who told him that the resolution was not convenient for them at the present time. But the Colonial Secretary was not at all sure that he was not in communication with the procedure of business, to believe that the business of this session could be brought to a close in December. Again, he did not think the Colonial Secretary was in favour of the abolition of State-aid to religion. The hon. member certainly opposed a motion made by Mr. Wentworth some years ago, and he was not at all sure that he was not in the support of their religion, and even stated that he did not approve of Sir Richard Bourke's Act. The hon. member thought the Church should be supported by the Government, and he was not at all sure that the hon. member thought was the Church of England. Inasmuch as the hon. Colonial Secretary had not altered his opinion, it was important that the Government should consider what was the measure the Government was likely to introduce, and whether it would be a measure that would probably obtain the support of the House. He was not at all sure that the hon. member had introduced by the hon. Colonial Secretary two years ago. On the meeting of Parliament in 1859 the speech of the Governor-General stated that the Government were not at all sure that the Church of England was not a good thing to be brought in. That premise was reduced

The motion was then put and negatived.

[illegible]

resolution, for the gradual extinction of slavery, I found that Mr. Arnold voted in favour of it, and it was not until I could explain the hon. member's inconsistency on this matter, that I was enabled to induce him to vote for an increase to schedule C, and then vote for its gradual extinction. But they found that the hon. member, at the head of the hon. member's opposition against abolishing schedule C, although he had voted against increasing it. He therefore thought that this question called for a pair of more inconsistent sentiments than any other question that had been put before the members of the House. He knew, in consequence of the hon. Minister for Works, and he believed in the propriety of the hon. member's vote on this question. The hon. member then moved an amendment order to carry out one of his far-fetched ideas, and he was obliged to oppose it, and he was met with the approval of the House, because it was voted by a majority of thirty-seven to four. He did not try to trouble the House with any further remarks, and although he had asked a question of Sir David to bring it had been discussed very often, and his opinions were well known, and he did not wish to take up this time of the House at the stage of the session longer than his duty required. He was glad to hear that the hon. member, then as now, could not place such blind faith in the House as to allow this question to be shelved for six months, and he was glad to hear that the hon. member, if they permitted this question to be shelved for twelve months before any legislation took place, that the country would be the judge of those who now the hon. member's resolution was put forward. Of course he did not expect the support of those who always lean in favour of State-aid to religion to vote for the hon. member's resolution, but he was glad to hear that this question pressed for settlement. He believed, therefore, every advocate for the suppression of State-aid to religion.

The vote for this motion.

PLEURISY-PNEUMONIA.

Hon. Minister for Lands has favoured us with the following information from Mr. J. J. Puck, a veterinary surgeon, who it will be remembered, has been supported by Government some days ago, to co-operate with Michie in making an investigation concerning the appearance of pleuro-pneumonia in the city of Campbelltown. The result of a series of mortem examinations showed that unfortunately many which is devastating herds in most districts, and is causing considerable loss in the county of Cumberland. It will be borne in mind to our readers to find from the annexed statement that at present investigation does not warrant the conclusion that the disease has extended to Mungie.

Campbelltown, December 3, 1901.

of having received a report that some of Mr. Harren's calves had been infected with disease.

The first place I would visit would be to examine a herd owned by Mr. George Taft, consisting of eighty head of calves, and owned by Mr. Taft's father, and examined by Mr. Taft, who is a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

The farm of Mr. Taft, and consisted of five head of calves, and was a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

about six months ago, supposed to be of the Cambridge breed, and was a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

I proceeded from thence to the farm of Mr. Harren, and there I found a herd of eighty head of calves, and was a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

On enquiry, I was informed that six calves had died from the disease, and were buried in a hole in the ground, and were a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

I also intercepted five bullocks, each having been infected with the disease, and were a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

I found these five bullocks in a paddock, and were a firm of working bullocks, and which he has been using for some time.

ly. I may here remark that I think the disease will not be so prevalent as was first supposed, but I am unable to give definite opinion until I have all the cattle runs inspected.

will be given, from the report of the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly yesterday, that the amount of remuneration to be given for cattle destroyed since the 22nd September is still an open question. The Colonial Secretary, in answer to a question put by Mr. Haper, said that the rate of compensation which would be given for cattle destroyed since the date of the passing of the resolutions brought forward by the Government, that which had been agreed to by the Government, was not to be paid excessively. By the House of Representatives the Government was pledged, and which pledged the Government had guaranteed to fulfil. Mr. Forster denied that any such guarantee had been given by the Government, in which denial several hon. members appeared to dissent.

W. who met his death by a dray passing over him on the 14th. From the evidence of Mr. King, it appeared that the deceased had been drinking on Thursday evening at Sullivan's, and had arranged to meet her at Sullivan's. Not keeping his appointment, she proceeded to the Sydney Road omnibus stop, and saw the dray overtake her. After waiting some time she saw the dray approach, and a stranger stopping it, she went up to it, when he informed her that the driver was killed.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

NORTHERN MAIL ROBBERIES—On Monday, John Owen was brought before the Bench at West Midlands Assizes, under the charge of being one of the three men recently robbed the Northern mail. Gustave Asmus was the first witness, and deposed that on the 20th of October, near the Chain of Ponds, on which occasion bag, but a part of the top had been cut off since he had lost eighty-four sovereigns; they were all colonial, the date 1861, unless there were one or two of 1860. So not a black penny was to be seen, and he carried such a bag like the one which he kept his gold in. The construction of this bag was very peculiar—the fold and stitching of the seam, with the strip of chambray introduced, being remarkable. "I had some doubts on it," the prisoner, on being asked if he had taken out, said, not, and he claimed the bag as his property—he made it; he had also a piece of the leather which it was made. Jonathan said supposed that he
